Root Says District Attorney Hates a

Thief and Cannot Be Put to Sleep.

New York, Nov. 2.—Elihu Root, secretary of state, has written to Judge Charles A. Flammer a letter congratulating him on his withdrawal from the race for district attorney in favor of District Attorney Jerome. The secretary's letter follows:

"Department of State, Washington, Oct. 25.—My dear Judge Flammer: I congratulate you upon your withdrawing from the race for the district attorneyship. It was public spirited and wise, and shows the qualities which have made you such a good judge and such a good citizen.

"The selection of a district attorney is not so much a question of one party against another as it is of all honest people against the crooks and criminals of every kind. Jerome now seems to have a good chance of election, and his election would be a great thing for New York. He has vigor and fearlessness and enthusiasm in the cause of justice, and hates a thief and cannot be hushed up or put to sleep by any influence whatsoever. Every man who cares about having a decent, law-abiding town ought to be for him. I am always, my dear judge, faithfully yours,

ELIHU ROOT.

"ELIHU ROOT."

AGAINST AMENDMENT.

"Niggerphobia," Says Bonaparte, Make
Democrats Shriek and Frown.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 2.—Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, addressing a Republican rally here, said among other things: "There is one consideration which has not been, so far as I know, urged at Republican meeting, although it was mentioned at the independent meeting in Baltimore Tuesday, to which I propose to call your attention. I mean the untimeliness of the amendments. Our constitution requires that the sense of the people to be taken every twenty years on the question, whether a convention shall be called to revise and alter the entire constitution. That question was submitted to the people in 1887 and answered, 'No.' The same question must again be asked and answered in 1907. That is to say, at the very next general election, and if the people then say 'Yes' delegates to the constitutional convention will probably be chosen at congressional election of the year following.

"What evils in our state government exist today which we cannot endure until shall come the time fixed by our present constitution itself for the comprehensive, orderly, systematic deviation of our ordinance law, if revision be needed, ring orators cry out because the negro votes. But the negro has now voted thirty-six years, and if we have survived his voting so long, surely he will not ruin us if we make the time thirty-nine years or forty. It is hard to say just what harm his voting has done (unless it be that he has helped the ring itself to retain power by playing upon race prejudice), for whenever Democratic speakers or writers get to this point in the discussion they have spasmodic attacks of that terrible mental malady, 'niggerphobia,' and begin to shriek and foam at the mouth so that a straight jacket and cell seem to next in order"

OFFICE INVESTIGATED.

No One Responsible for the Establishment Has Been Found.

Boston, Nov. 2.—The authorities here have been investigating the office of Mrs. Dr. Bishop, mentioned in connection with the dismembered body found in a dress suit case of Winthrop, for several days, but no one responsible for the conduct of the establishment has been found. Two of the physicians attached to the office disappeared some days ago, and one of them is said to be in New York. Mrs. Bishop says she has had no connection with the business for a long time.

Apparently They Did.

Friend—Did the lawyers get you confused? Ex-Witness—Did they get me confused? Why, I testified that Jones lived next door to me, but I couldn't remember the street number.—Puck.

No Genius.

"If you had a spark of genius," he began crossly to his typewriter.
"I wouldn't be here," she interrupted.
And no more was said.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Education begins the gentleman, but reading, good company and reflection must finish him.—Locke.

GRATIFYING INCREASE.

Wholesale Trade and Manufacturing

Twenty Per Cent Better.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Chicago's wholesale trade and manufacturing industries, in volume of business, have increased twenty per cent for the year ended Oct. 31 over the record of the preceding twelve months and 100 per cent over ten years ago. In fourteen years they have trebled.

The figures were obtained from the publicity department of the Chicago Commercial association. In many lines the percentage is even higher than that recorded in the foregoing tables, notably in clothing and in boots and shoes, but twenty per cent has been taken as a conservative basis, including all branches of trade.

The increase in business in the last year is regarded as the more remarkable in view of the long teamsters' strike during the summer. It is declared that this reduced the increase by at least 5 per cent.

HAS BEEN CLOSED.

Farmers' National Bank of Kingfisher, Okla., In Receiver's Hands.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The Farmers' National bank of Kingfisher, Okla., has been closed by direction of the comptroller of the currency. Charles T. Cherry, receiver of the Capitol National bank of Guthrie, has been appointed receiver. Nearly all of the stock of the Kingfisher bank is held as collateral securities or owned by the Denver Savings bank, which recently failed, and is now in the hands of a receiver. Subsequent to the failure of the Denver Savings bank, the bank attempted voluntary liquidation, but was unable to obtain the necessary two-thirds vote of the stock. The capital of the bank is largely impaired by losses which the stockholders were unable to make good in the manner provided by law.

The Farmers' National bank was organized in 1903 with a capital of $25,000. It had loans of $10,000, according to the last statement, and deposits of $20,000. J. A. Hill is president and R. Pappe vice president.

MAY BEAT MACHINE.

Small Rubber Band Can Prevent Registration of Votes.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to the Tribune from San Francisco says: The voting machine to be used at the coming municipal election Nov. 7, was given a test before a committee representing the fusionists, as it had been claimed it was possible to beat the machine.

A linotype operator on a newspaper showed that by placing a small rubber band in a certain place near the name of the fusion candidate for mayor the machine would not register for the mayor, though it would for all the other candidates. An expert representing the machine company and half a dozen newspaper men were unable to make the machine register while the rubber band was in place.

Devlin Dies of Paralysis.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Charles J. Devlin, the widely known western coal mine operator, who recently underwent bankruptcy with liabilities of $4,000,000, died at St. Elizabeth's hospital as the result of a stroke of paralysis. He suffered a previous stroke last summer.

HUNDREDS SLAIN.

Soldiers Refused to Fire on the People,
but Shot Into Cossacks.

London, Nov. 2.—The Odessa correspondent of the Daily Telegram says that Wednesday's casualties probably will reach some hundreds. He adds that it is reported that the soldiers refused to fire on the people when ordered, and fired on the Cossacks, who came to quell the disturbance, killing or wounding many of them.

Panic Prevailed.

Poltava, Russia, Nov. 2.—Cossacks dispersed a peaceful crowd, which, with the authority of the chief of police, has assembled to witness the liberation of the political prisoners. Some were killed and an immense number seriously wounded, and many fatally wounded. A terrible panic prevailed.

Galveston plumbers struck for $4 per day. They have been getting $3.

Louis the Great's Size.

Louis the Great had even and tolerably regular features without any strongly marked characteristics. By all his contemporaries he is spoken of as a tall man, but he had a way of raising his head, surmounted by the monstrous wig he wore, and of swelling his chest that created the impression of height, for when the sepulchers of the kings were violated by the convention and his body was dragged out of his coffin it was measured and found a trifle over 5 feet 6 inches.

A Fortune In His Legs.

During the reign of Queen Elizabeth an English gentleman of wealth named Corbet, of a distinguished family near Shrewsbury, bet that his leg was the handsomest in the country or kingdom and staked estates worth £80,000 on the subject. He won the wager, and a picture is still preserved in the family mansion representing the process of measuring the legs of the different contestants.

The attendance at the Dallas fair has reached the 65,000 mark.

A Waco man has been fined $500 and twelve months in jail for striking a witness.

The attorney general's department is swamped with business and working overtime.

The president has issued the annual Thanksgiving proclamation setting apart Thursday Nov. 30, as a day for national thanksgiving.

The policy holder companies outside of insurance be called to meet in Dallas Nov. 15, organize, according to press dispatches.

SCALPING SCALPERS.

"The war is still on between the railroads and ticket scalpers. Time was when the railroads cooperated with scalpers, but that time seems to have passed. The railroads now really want scalpers suppressed, and it ought to be done. The State claims the right to control the railroads; that involves the duty to protect them in contracts. A ticket sold to one person to go both ways on it is not a contract for one man to go one way and another man to go back on the ticket. If the railroads want the scalper scalped, the top of his caput should be pulled off. At Ft. Worth, United States District Judge Edward R. Meek declined to grant a temporary injunction for ticket brokers against certain railway companies, but a temporary injunction was granted by Judge Smith in the Ticket Brokers versus the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co., et al. The injunction is brought against all of the lines entering Dallas, as well as the roads running into that city. The plaintiff alleges in substance that the railway companies make a pretense of making a contract with the people who buy tickets, that the tickets are not transferable, and that under the laws of the State they are transferable, and that there is no contract; that it is an attempt to stifle competition

Curiosities About Fish Scales.
The thin, silvery coating of fish scales derives its luster from many minute crystals of lime, mixed with a peculiar substance called "guanine." This coating of silver crystals is very easily rubbed off the scales, and in the case of a European species of carp known as the "bleak" the crystals are so numerous that a metallic pigment, commercially known as "argentine," is made from them. The large globular glass beads, known as "German" or "Roman" pearls, are coated on the inside with this substance. In some species of fish with lusterless scales the silvery lining is found on the inside of the body. A well known example of this is seen in the common smelt.

Broken In Her Hearth.

A volume from Germany, "The New Opera Glass," containing "the plots of the most popular operas," affords the following concerning Goetz's "The Taming of the Refractory": "Fourth act—Room in Petruchio's house. Petruchio bursting for anger about all things; nothing can satisfy him. Katharine is nearly broken in the heart, but she loves him, and her refractory is justly going away. Petruchio also loves her, and after some quarrels their hearts are finding together to a happy life."

DIETARY STANDARDS.

What Observation Indicates to Be the Average Man's Daily Food Need.

Accepting the daily dietary standards which are based upon observations as to what people are accustomed to consume, it is plain that the average man doing from light to moderate muscular work must take each day approximately 116 grams of protein matter (18 grams of nitrogen), with sufficient fat and carbohydrate to yield a total fuel value of 3,050 large calories. The usual proportion of carbohydrate (mostly starchy food) is about 500 grams to 50-60 grams of fat. In other words, the average man needs, according to the above hypothesis, approximately 120 grams of protein, 500 grams of carbohydrate and 60 grams of fat for his daily ration. In order to obtain these amounts of nutrients he would require per day three-fourths of a pound of ordinary roast beef, one pound of boiled potato, one-half pound of white bread and one-fourth of a pound of butter. Naturally much greater variety of food might be adopted with the same nutritive values as the above, but these figures will suffice to give some impression of the quantities of ordinary cooked food-stuffs required to yield the nitrogen and the total fuel value called for by the above standard dietary.

A more elaborate diet, one in large measure free from meat and having essentially the same content of nitrogen and with a total fuel value of approximately 3,000 calories, would be as follows: Fried hominy, six ounces; syrup, three ounces; baked potato, eight ounces; butter, one and one-half ounces; baked spaghetti, ten ounces; mashed potato, ten ounces; boiled turnip, six ounces; bread, two ounces; apple sauce, eight ounces; apple tapioca pudding, twelve ounces; fried sweet potato, eight ounces; fried bacon, one ounce; fruit jam, four ounces; coffee, one and one-half pints, and tea, three-fourths of a pint. Such diet, owing to its vegetable nature and lack of concentration, is naturally quite voluminous. A greater concentration of diet is easily obtained by replacement of a portion of the vegetable matter by meat, and this the ordinary man, with his highly developed palate, usually prefers to do because of the increased flavor which his acquired taste now calls for. Further, the resources at the command of the civilized man render possible great variety in matters of diet, but whatever the character of the daily food or however great the number and variety of the ingredients it will be found that the nitrogen content and fuel value of the daily food of mankind will in general correspond in large measure to the dietary standards usually adopted throughout the civilized world.—Russell H. Chittenden in Century.

Accent on the Operatic Stage.

No Englishman with daughters could do a rasher thing than permit them to take lessons from As the Professors with a view of the stage. As the professors with a view of the stage in E. J. Fountain & Co. scarcely exists. At Covent Garden, a woman who can speak good English can only get in by force of social influence, and abroad, a foreigner has very great difficulty because she cannot speak or sing with a perfect accent. The foreign lady or gentleman comes across here and on occasion will venture to sing in English, and their mistakes bring nothing more than a smile to the faces of the audience. But let an English singer go to France or Germany, and something totally different happens.

In 1897 Tamagno sang at Monte Carlo before an audience which was mainly French. He mispronounced a word, and a peal of derisive laughter covered even his stentorian notes. In Brussels I heard an American tenor laugh at because some of his vowels were not quite pure—Brussels, where their French is the most villainous patois I have ever heard. In Germany I have heard both French and English artists laughed at because their accent was not absolutely correct.—London Saturday Review.

Russian Discipline.

General Dragomiroff, the Russian military expert, rose from the ranks and always dressed according to the army regulations for the common soldier. One day while driving about St. Petersburg in his carriage he noticed a soldier with hair longer than the regulations called for. He had the horses stopped, alighted, and taking off his sword, ordered the soldier to seize him by the hair. The soldier hesitated. He feared to lay violent hands on his general; besides, the hair was clipped too close to afford a hold for the hands. The general surveyed the soldier sternly for a few moments, then twining his fingers in the latter's locks, he literally wiped up the street with him, the victim not daring to resist. Finally, having impressed the lesson thoroughly, he re-entered his carriage and drove on, ordering the soldier to follow. At the first barber's shop they came to he again alighted and had every vestige of hair shaved from the soldier's head, then turned him loose as a horrible example to his fellows.

King James' Books.

Some very fine binding was executed for King James I, who during his entire life was an enthusiastic patron of letters and art. In some of his books the thistle is introduced with heavy corner pieces, and the arms in the center. One fine piece of work, now in the British museum, is in bright brown calf, powdered with flower-de-luce. Another folio in crimson velvet has the arms of England embroidered on both sides with gold thread on a ground-work of yellow silk. The king's initials are worked above. The lettering is in leather, and the boards are tied together by red ribbon, constituting a regal book in every particular. John Gibson, in Scotland, and the Barkers, in England, were appointed to be the king's binders, but there is little trace of their work now extant.

Animal Having the Most Teeth.

The animal having the most teeth is the great armadillo of south Central and northern South America. It is a fact well known to most people that the normal or average number of teeth in mammals is thirty-two-sixteen above and the same number below. The great armadillo, however, is an exception, having from 92 to 100. He has from twenty-four to twenty-six in each side of the upper jaw and from twenty-two to twenty-four in each side of the lower jaw. Another peculiarity lies in the fact that they are all molars or grinders. They increase in size from front to back, instead of from the root, and are wholly destitute of enamel.

Jury Subbing.

Mexico has an ingenious plan for facilitating verdicts in jury trials. Two supernumerary jurors are drawn to sit near the jury box and listen to the evidence and arguments. If any of the regular jury falls ill or is otherwise disqualified from going on, one of the "spares" takes his place. In this way they avoid what is often seen in American courts—a long trial rendered useless when it is nearly finished by the sudden illness or death of one juror.

Madrid's Night Watchmen.

Madrid still has the mediaeval night watchmen. They admit late comers to the apartment houses at night, but no longer sing out the hour or the condition of the weather. They still go by the name of "sereno," which they got from the fact that, as it seldom rains in Spain, their cries about the weather generally ended with that word ("las tres y sereno").

Just Rebuke.

"What is it now?"
"I wanna nother pieca cake!"
"No, Tommy, you've had enough."
"Aw, ma! Yer always tellin' me I don't eat properly, an' now you don't never gimme no chance to practice!"—Cleveland Leader.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

Dobson—What became of that man who had twenty-seven medals for saving people from drowning? Dock Worker—He fell in one day when he had them all on, and the weight of 'em sunk him.

ETIQUETTE AMONG PEERS.

Rules Laid Down to Preserve the Dignity of Their Chamber.

Besides insisting upon all due respect to themselves the peers suffer no disrespect to the stately gilded chamber in which they are accustomed to assemble. Even when parliament is not in session none but members are allowed to be covered there. Not even the eldest son of any peer may wear his hat in the room. "Neither is any person to stay there, nor any attendant on any nobleman but while he brings in his lord, and then he is to retire himself."

In 1703 official notice was taken of the fact that of late the doorkeepers have frequently presumed to come within the doors when the house is sitting, and it was therefore ordered that for the future this liberty be forbidden. Another point in which the peers are scrupulous to preserve their dignity is revealed in the standing order with reference to conferences between the two houses.

It sets forth that "the place of our meeting with the lower house upon conference is usually the painted chamber, where they are commonly before we come and expect our leisure. We are to come thither in a whole body and not some lords scattering before the rest, which both takes from the gravity of the lords and besides may hinder the lords from taking their proper places. We are to sit there and be covered, but they are not at any committee or conference either to be covered or sit down in our presence unless it be some infirm person and that by connivance in a corner out of sight, to sit, but not to be covered."

Although never rescinded, this regulation is now practically obsolete.—Chambers' Journal.

Most people when they buy experience don't get a bargain.—Somerville Journal.

ACCIDENT—Our Companies issue policies at the same price as others, and give larger benefits. $1.00 per month buys from $100 to $600 death from accident. $15 to $60 per month accident indemnity. $15 to $40 per month sickness indemnity. $50 to $300 for loss of one hand or one foot—all for $1.00 per month.

LIVE STOCK—We insure the life of your horse, mule, or cow.

GOTTON—Special inducements to those holding cotton, in town or on your farm.

JEWISH HUMOR.

Its Flavor of Bitterness and Its Satire of Judaism.

Renan said of the Jews: "The Semitic people are almost like without the power to laugh." As if he had looked for traces of Jewish humor in the light which Heine cast back upon its dark tradition he would never have made so sweeping a statement. For eight years Heine lay upon his "matress grave" in Paris suffering excruciating agony. He deserved, he said, to have awarded to him "the grand medals of pain and misery." Leopold Zunz said almost the same words of the whole Hebrew people. "If there are ranks in suffering, Israel takes precedence of all the nations." The humor of Israel is flavored with bitterness and plays round the greater subjects of thought and of speculation; plays like the humor of a man in pain.

Listen to the lament of a satirist born at Arles in 1287 who finds the works of the Jewish law an insatiable burden and seems to have come, like Heine, to the bitter conclusion that "Judaism is not a religion, it is a misfortune."

Oh, hapless sire, distraught with cares, Whose wife to him male children bears, For all of them, or rich or poor, Have only suffering to endure. This is caused by the Jewish creed. Whose yoke is hard to bear indeed. Its many laws and regulations Which are unknown to other nations Every Hebrew must observe With watchful eye and straining nerve; Even though he shares in public functions, He still must follow their injunctions.

The Bible is not half enough; Glosses there are and other stuff In which he eruditely must be, Especially in theology, In all the Talmud may relate, In authors' quarrels and debate, In things particularly small, Of no significance at all.

One more mediaeval quotation, this time from the pen of a Barcelona Jew. The lines can hardly perhaps be called humorous, but they illustrate with a certain terse comedy the great value set by the race upon three things—money, knowledge and domestic happiness. If a man has none of them the poet has no better advice to give him than to hold his tongue or to hang himself:

What is the most useful thing to any man in life? Knowledge or wealth or a good and loving wife. But if none of these commodities man has ever got Then by keeping golden silence he might improve his lot. And if he cannot do so, that poor and hapless knave, Then let him go away at once and dig himself a grave.

On his deathbed Heine made his last joke, and it is typically Jewish. "Reviewing his by no means irreproachable past," he hoped that God might forgive him, "for c'est son metier"—(that is his trade). Another story illustrates yet more perfectly the bitter humor of the Jew. It is the story of a dying rabbi "who had been all his lifetime extremely religious, but had likewise always suffered much want and misery. 'Do you know,' he said to those in the sickroom, 'if after all the sad experiences I have had in the past there is no future life I shall be greatly amused.'—London Spectator.

Colophon.

Colophon was a city of ancient Ionia, nine miles north of Ephesus, and near the sea. It was said to be the birthplace of Homer, and near it was a famous oracle of Apollo. The Greek proverb, "To put a colophon to it," meaning to end an affair handsomely, is explained by Strabo as arising from a belief that the cavalry of Colophon was so excellent in quality that their charge was always decisive in a battle. Hence arose the custom of calling any name or monogram or printer's name or sign or date of printing in old printed books a colophon in the sense of a definite, satisfactory end.

Tycho Brahe.

It was the great eclipse of Aug. 21, 1560, that turned Tycho Brahe into an astronomer. He was in his fourteenth year at the time, a Danish boy of noble origin, and had been destined first for the army and then for the law. But the accuracy with which the eclipse was predicted impressed him with the belief that astronomy was a divine thing, and thenceforward he devoted his life to it. The debt of astronomy to Tycho Brahe not only for his own work, but as the man who shaped the genius of Kepler, can scarcely be overestimated.

Dinner in a Bell.

In the tower of Erfurt cathedral hangs a huge bell ten feet high and thirty feet in circumference, weighing thirteen tons. Within this in July, 1713, dined ten of the town's most opulent burghers on dishes cooked in a kitchen temporarily erected on the beam that supported the ponderous mass of tintinnabulatory metal. To celebrate this repast medals were struck, having on the obverse the portraits of the guests and on the reverse the representation of the curious scene.

A Bad Patient.

Friend—I suppose you're always glad to get a patient who's never had any bad habits. Doctor—Indeed I'm not. Friend—How's that? Doctor—Why, man, I can't order him to stop anything.—Louisville Courier-Journal.
